

Journey to Africa

I had long dreamed of a trip to Africa to see big animals. After a lot of research, I ended up taking an 11-day bush camping safari in Botswana. That rather arduous and wild experience—yikes! Hyenas, a leopard, a jackal right in our camps at night—was followed by four days at a luxury lodge, where each thatched-roof “cottage” has its own wildlife watering hole out back. The safari and lodge both involved a long safari drive in the morning and in the evening. I kept a journal and on a whim, kept writing down counts of all the big animals I saw. The surprising total: 5,619.
